Donald Montgomery, Washington representative of the United Auto Workers-CIO, who said he spoke for the parent organization, told a senate banking subcommittee that both price controls and rationing are needed.

The subcommittee is considering a bill by Senator Flanders (R-Vt) which would provide standby authority for rationing meat, but no direct price control. The program could be instituted by congress or the president, with congress holding a veto power.

Boris Shiskin, economist for the AFL, told the subcommittee "it is difficult to escape the conclusion that a major share of responsibility" for rising meats costs rests with the packers.

The house passed today the GOPbacked $6,500,000,000 tax-cutting bill. The vote was 297 for and 120 against.
It cuts everybody's income taxes

Death stalks me from the time I leave here until the day is done. I have to stay out all day, you know, because you can't depend on the sun anymore than you can depend on my shadow. Comb to think of it, they're probably out together.

"But the prices again. You see as a whole you people are the most ignorant bums in the world. Say 'hog' to an individual, and you don't know what will happen. 'Hog' makes 'em think of yoms and pork makes 'em think of yoms and pork makes 'em think of yoms and

CROUP

By W. P. BROWN Of Johnson's Pharmacy

There are two kinds of croup, the simple spasmodic type and the severe type. Both must be considered as serious, for in the early stages it is impossible to tell them apart. When a child's voice becomes hoarse, weak or husky, the doctor should be consulted at once. Often during an attack a child will become frightened, causing the symptoms to increase. Spasmodic croup appears suddenly between bedtime and midnight, and the husky voice is accompanied by difficulty in breathing. Illness in children should always be regarded as ser ious, and the best medical care obtained for them at once. Make sure of the finest medication by patronizing a druggist experienced and trusted in compounding medicine.

Earlier, at the services beside the Jumna, a throng of 5,000 watched quietly as the ashes were sifted carefully. One object sifted out was handed to Nehru. Witnesses speculated that it might hive been one of the bullets which struck Gandhi Friday night, but there was no explanation from anyone in position to know.

Later a close adviser to the Gandhi family said the object was not a bullet. He said it might be the charred remains of a steel pen someone had thrown into the fire. Gandhi's bones were picked from the ashes during the service and put into an urn. The ashes were poured, by hand and with a garden shovel and clap coops, into sacks. The remains were left to be picked up by miliatry lorry and hauled away to await final disposition.
